The Southern Nevada Infectious Disease Society (SNIDS) brings together local infectious disease experts in the Southern Nevada area to better prepare our communities to fight infectious diseases in the future. The organization is comprised of physicians, scientists, and other health care professionals dedicated to promoting and recognizing excellence in research, patient care, public health, disease prevention, and education in infectious diseases.

Program Description

To alleviate the nationwide shortage of infectious disease physicians, which is dire in NV. ID physicians have proven value in clinical medicine and quality improvement. The pandemic has exacerbated the clinician shortage in our specialty, resulting in severely reduced access to quality ID care and lack of specialist support to our public health authorities.
